

user stories

As a busy student, I need to be able to create an account and easily login to a place where I can organize my schedule.

As a middle school student, I need to be able to have a single space to view all my assignments for the current day.

As a middle school student, I need to be able to add assignments as they come up to the current day, to the rest of the week, or rest of the month.

As an adult with many responsibilities, I need to be able to see the upcoming assignments I have for the week so I know how to plan my days.

As a busy adult, I need to be able to see how long I should spend on each assignment so I can manage my time appropriately.

As an adult who is not technologically advanced, I need a way to keep track of all my responsibilities and time commitments that would be easy for me to learn and utilize throughout my day.

As an adult who is not technologically advanced, I need to be able to get rid of or edit events and assignments I have added to my schedule if I make a mistake.

As a busy college student, I need to be able to add my classes to my schedule so that I can plan my time around those classes.

As a college student, I need to be able to organize my own schedule and plan out my assignments in any way I like.

As a student, I need to be able to add assignments repeatedly to my schedule, if I want to complete the same assignment multiple times throughout the day, week, or month.

As an unmotivated high school student, I need to be able to use shortcut assignments so that I can spend less time planning and do not waste time creating the same exact assignment over and over again.

As a student athlete, I need to be able to figure out what assignments I have time to do in my short breaks between athletic practice and classes.

As an unmotivated student, I need my calendar to tell me when to do work so that I don't have to get stressed trying to plan my schedule later on in the day.